

Making History School's Out!

from NHD, p. 6 him as a Righteous Gentile because they claim he did not risk his life.

“Israel says he didn’t risk his life, but I say he did,” said Goodwin. “The State Department was so anti-Semitic and didn’t want it out that they were hiding important information. He did receive death threats, but he chose to ignore them, which was so typical of him. He had a mission and he was going to fulfill it no matter what.”

Goodwin said he was very impressed with the Rosa group’s documentary on his friend and is sending them money to help allay expenses of the national competition.

“I’m very proud of what they’re doing and think they have a good chance to win the national contest and further highlight the horrors of the Holocaust.”

Meanwhile, the DuBois group has been on a mission to present the documentary to any and all groups, including an audience with the National Museum of American Jewish History later this month as well as a meeting arranged with U.S. Representative Donald Norcross. On June 20, they will present the documentary at the Raab/Goodwin Holocaust Museum’s volunteer recognition night.

Their dreams are larger, however. They know that a movie about Irena Sendler, a Polish woman who saved Jews during the Holocaust, started as an NHD project and have had more than a few passing conversations about who would play DuBois in a movie version.

“We all feel so lucky to have found out his story and that we’ve been able to tell it,” said Shayna. “I think we all want

After a long year of learning, we have two and a half months of school-free days to do whatever we want.

With no boundaries or test dates to block our path to freedom, I just want to say thanks to everyone who made this year great for everyone.

From the teachers at this school to your families at home, thank you for supporting your students and children.

Good Luck in high school to our 8th graders. We, the 7th graders, now move up to become the leaders of the school. And of course, welcome to our incoming 6th graders.

See you in September everyone!
